Quick-thinking Vanvliet revives Queen Liz

PRINCESS DI NABBED

By DAVE HOGMEAT

Scum Staff Writer reporting from London, England

Diana, Princess of Wales, was kidnapped early this morning from the penthouse suite of Hotel La Italia in Rome, Italy.

As of noon today, no individual or group has yet claimed responsibility for the abduction. The Princess' whereabouts are unknown and her safety is in question.

It is rumoured that Libya's Moammar Khadafy may be involved in the kidnapping.

"He seemed to take a special interest in the Princess when they met in the Bahamas last year," said a close friend of the Royal family who asked to remain anonymous for security reasons.

The kidnapping took place at approximately six this morning Rome time. Two Italians, who presumably witnessed the abduction, were found dead near the back entrance of the elegant and expensive hotel.

The Italian Police and Secret Service, as well as Scotland Yard, the Grave Yard, Interpol, the CIA, and the KGB have all joined forces to investigate the abduction.

Even the Mafia offered to help. Giorgio K. Armani, the spokesperson for the underground organization exclaimed passionately: "Mamma mia! Ritorno presto a Roma... this is not perfetto. Ah, shame...shame. We will help, the brothers will help...yes?"

The Pope included a plea for the freedom of the Princess in his morning mass prayers.

A distraught Charles blamed himself for the abduction.

"It was terribly thoughtless of me to go shaving at six in the morning. If I had only waited for five minutes, darling Diana would not have been kidnapped by these...these senseless barbarians."

Charles and Diana were scheduled to leave for Madrid, Spain at nine this morning. The Royal couple were on an unofficial two week tour to some Mediterranean states to promote English muffins.

The English muffins, or crumpets to the British, have become very popular in the Mediterranean. The British National Crumpets Association is currently exporting over 50 varieties of crumpets to Greece, Spain, and other Mediterranean countries. The most popular kinds are banana and nut, maple syrup, and chocolate chip crumpets.

The Queen, who was in the middle of a state breakfast to honour top Canadian journalists Gwynn Dyer, Peter Gzowski, and Lynnetta Van Vliet, collapsed from a heart attack upon hearing the news.

"Everybody in the room was dazed and nobody moved even when the Queen fell from the chair. Thank God Lynn was quick. She gave Her Majesty mouth-to-mouth resuscitation immediately. Peter went for help and I tried to calm everybody," said Dyer.

There were 50 guests at the state breakfast, including Winston M. Churchill, an MP from Northumberland; Barbara Cartland, Princess Diana's stepgranny and popular romance writer; Sheena Easton; Rupert Murdoch, the international media tycoon; and Myer Horowitz.

"Hell, it was scary. I almost got lost in the Palace's corridors. The telephone was disconnected, so I had to yell like crazy from room to room," grumbled Gzowski. "I didn't finish my toast and tea, but what the heck...I was glad I could help out a bit."

The Queen's private physician confirmed reports that if Van Vliet had not acted as quickly as she had, the Queen's life might be in a serious danger.

Van Vliet, however, refused to take all the credit.

"It was no big deal really. The credit should go to my former swimming instructors at the U of A pool who refused to pass me when I couldn't perform the rescue breathing properly."

Horowitz, the university's president who was also at the breakfast, promised to allocate more money for the pool in the near future.

"We feel that this incident has shown that it is crucial for us as a fine Canadian learning institution to maintain our excellent standards and to offer more swimming courses as well as to improve the shower facility at the pool."

The shower facility at the university pool resembles a downpour sometimes and a drizzle most of the time.

The Queen is now in a stable condition.

Brits are outraged and shocked by the abduction.

Aye, this evil deed, not good for the soul indeed. Our poor bonnie lassie, and our poor us, bonnie Prince Charlie," lamented Scotty of Star Trek Enterprises, Glasgow.

"I absolutely shall not tolerate this bloody nonsense," declared Margaret Thatcher when she was informed by the Palace. It was not clear whether the bloody nonsense she referred to was the Princess' kidnapping or the Queen's heart attack.

Meanwhile, in Ottawa, Brian Baloney commended the promptness of the Canadian journalists in taking charge of the situation at Buckingham Palace. "We Canadians are always in the center of the action."

However, he also expressed his concern over the irresponsible act of the people who abducted the Princess.

"We should do something about it, really we should, I swear to God," said the Prime Minister. "Joey, get Ronnie on the phone line and ask him what he thinks we ought to do."

Death, Blood, chicks at Jonestown Poultry

By BILL DOORSTOP
Scum Staff Writer

Five agriculture students were killed and twenty others mangled following a senseless, savage attack by a flock of raving chickens yesterday.

"It was horrible!" sobbed Mary Lou Dairy, one of the survivors of the ill-fated tour to ——— Poultry Ltd. "It was so strange. All the chickens s t o p p e d c l u c k i n g . I started feeling awfully chicken about being in there, those birds really seemed to be in a foul mood."

The farm's manager, Eyell B. Darned, agreed saying he'd never seen anything like it. "You can tell when the chickens are happy, because they all cluck differently, y'know?"

"It's kind of a cluck, cluck, cluck, cluck, cluck," he said, while demonstrating by sitting in a crouched position and waving his arms with his hands tucked into his armpits. "But this was weird, a bunch of them were all clucking at the same time, sort of like a chant."

Darned, who claims to understand 'Chickenese' as he calls it, said the gang was chanting 'two wings good, cowboy boots bad'."

They converged on the group of panicking aggies, tightening the soon-to-be circle of death, when one chicken screamed and charged, leading the rest in a ferocious assault.

"They were flappin' and squawkin' and cryin'... the chickens made a lot of noise too," said the stunned Darned. "Those birds were vicious, they went right for the throat."

Flesh, feathers, and little pearly snap-on buttons billed the air as the aggies vainly struggled to avoid the punishing wings and slashing beaks of the sadistic, felonious fowl.

The rest of the chickens sat around and laughed at the gruesome spectacle.

According to Darned, a bunch of them sardonically called out, "Let's take them to the roof and throw them off. They can fly, can't they?" a remark that was greeted with much brutal amusement by the throng of debauched birds.

Dairy said the only thing that kept her and the others from certain death was grabbing eggs in their hands and screaming "don't move or we'll c r u s h t h e embryos" to the bloodthirsty mob.

None of the survivors had any explanation why the five killed were especially singled out for the riff-raff's wrath, but one of them summarized the feelings of the group and said, "all I know is I'm glad my face doesn't look like it got shoved into a cuisinart."

All Darned could get out of the chickens for this reporter was a guttural "fuck 'em, we're pissed off and they deserved it."

So the mysterious reasons behind the fates of E.G.G. McMuffin, M.c. Chicken, Shake N. Bake, C. AlaKing, and A. Fryer will remain that way until further investigation.

Authorities have the perpetrators in custody and a juicy, mouth-watering trial is expected.

BADEAR IS HISTORY

Dean gets boot

By TONY BALONEY
Scum Staff Writer

Faculty of Home Economics dean Badear says she's being forced to retire by a radical group of Aggies.

The conflict stems back two years when the Food and Nutrition department of Home Ec entered in, and won, a cookie baking contest sponsored by the department of Food Science. The dean is quoted as saying: "Aggies could never cook because they're half-baked." The dean claims the campus food science students are blackmailing the university administration, which has resulted in "pressure" on the dean to retire.

"They have been harrassing me all year now," says the irate home economist. The dean's parking permit was revoked in December, which resulted in her car being towed. When the vehicle was returned, it had RETIRE written in the dust across the windshield.

Food Service has asked her to resign from the university food tasting panel, which samples lunch every day at Blister Hall. The gas was turned off during Food and Nutrition labs allegedly at the request of the dean.

"I did no such thing," retorts Badear. There have also been rumours that the long awaited plans for a new Home Ec building will be finalized only after the dean retires. Many of the white-haired faculty members are excited at the prospect of a new building. Says Dr. Cornell: "I'm sick and tired of working in the men's room."

Apparently most of the men's washrooms in the Home Economics building have been converted to offices due to a chronic lack of space in the old building.

The Agriculture department has held up all progress on the new building at the Board of Governors. Badear insists she is being deserted by her colleagues, who would rather have a spacious office than keep Badear in the ranks.

The university administration denies a harassment campaign has been mounted. However, one of the secretaries, who did not wish to be identified, claims (for $20) that administrators secretly refer to the dean as "ol' Doris".

Badear doesn't think she will fight the administration. Says she: "They offered me a juicy position on one of Horowitz's committees, and I'll enjoy retiring at 45."

Bubbles prides herself on her natural look.

Go for it!

Toboli Mbenga, the premier of the emerging nation of Marinya, has come up with a plan to solve many of the world's problems using Velcro.

World leaders have generally ignored Mbenga's plan.

However, this suggestion certainly deserves far more consideration than it is getting.

There can be no question that it is time for a new approach to world affairs. Summit meetings and speeches containing meaningless platitudes are obviously not solving the problem of starvation in Africa or relieving the tensions between the superpowers.

Mbenga's plan does offer hope for the resolution of these problems and many others.

He proposes, for example, that the nuclear threat could be eliminated by presenting the leaders of the superpowers with pants made out of the fuzzy stuff just before their next summit meeting and then putting slipcovers made out of the sticky stuff on their chairs before they sit down. Neither would receive any assistance in getting up until a meaningful arms control package had been worked out.

Gorbachev would not be helped to stand until he had also agreed to pull the Soviet troops out of Afghanistan.

A similar strategy could be used to end the multitude of other situations like this — the war between Iran and Iraq, the civil wars in Nicaragua and El Salvador, etc., etc.

The hunger in Ethiopia could be alleviated by Velcroing all the government officials in that country to their chairs and letting the U.N. relief effort take over the distribution of the food sent by the Western countries.

Mbenga's plan can even be mad to extend beyond major world problems such as these.

Here in Alberta, we could pave the highways with the fuzzy stuff and put the sticky stuff on car tires to keep drunk drivers from accidentally drifting into the wrong lane.

If the same treatment could be applied to the sidewalks, we could get tourists to stay longer simply by giving them shoes made out of the sticky stuff when they cross the border. This would certainly help our economy.

Even local problems could be solved by adapting Mbenga's plan.

The Convention Centre could be held fast by attaching Velcro to the foundations at the top of the riverbank.

Velcro could also be used to close the mouths of our local politicians before they say anything to offend each other and start lawsuits.

In addition to all of the above advantages, worldwide adoption of Mbenga's proposal would mean many more jobs in the petrochemical industry, which would have to increase production to meet the new demand for the plastic in Velcro.

This would certainly help Alberta's economy.

Velcro.

It's an idea that shouldn't be ignored.

The Insight Page... The Insight Page... The Insight Page... The In

Our universities and the red menace

I have been travelling the soft lib-left ivory tower campuses of this land for the past several months and what do I see?

Weakness... Useful idiots. The pusillanimous portrayers of pacifism. The muddleheaded softhearted sponges of Soviet propaganda. Everywhere. EVERYWHERE undermining our western democratic way of life through their intellectual incompetence and misguided pseudo-morality.

Alcohol and greasy hamburgers filling their fat bellies and fogging their simple minds.

Lust for wealth pervades their every thought, the all-mighty job, the omnipotent dollar... their myopic color-blind eyes that see only green and, strangely enough, never red.

It's as if the threat of the Russian bear gnawing on their white, chubby legs doesn't even exist. It's as if they think they'll always have a vote to cast, or a choice of different beers to vomit, or have state planners telling them what kind of pizza they have to eat.

Is there no hope? What can be done to shake these ideological laggards out of their complacency, the pink delusions caused by their closet communist hypnotists known as professors?

Why aren't they protesting that the poisonous thoughts of the totalitarianism, Karl Marx, are being taught in their sociology? Don't they value free thought?

On some campuses, they prevented the South African Ambassador from speaking! These criminally ingenuous dolts are playing right into the hands of the muscovite scheme machine. They are cutting the throat of free speech in this country without Ivan having to fire one missile.

Even the University of Alberta, a school I used to admire for its ideological purity, has left me with a feeling of despair.

At their Students' Union election this past March, one fine example of what young Canadian manhood should be bravely marched into the breach of the election gauntlet. This young man, a second lieutenant in the Canadian Armed Forces Reserve, a graduate of the NATO combat arms school, a patriot putting his life where his principles are, was scoffed at, ridiculed, called a NAZI, had his very sanity questioned publicly. Shortly before all that, a group of dupes yelled "Sieg Heil!" at him for several minutes.

One could have hardly blamed him if he had taken a NATO standard-issue assault rifle and mowed those mad dogs down.

And guess who won the year before? A skinny weak little fellow with a taste for appeasement who has actually taken (need I say it?) a Russian history course.

LUBOR

Joseph Stalin is laughing in his grave.

So even a sea of true-blue is developing a tinge of pink, but the question remains: what can be done to turn the tide?

In my cautious opinion, we must reinstate conscription immediately. A heavily disciplined dose of trial by fire in the price of democracy would be very beneficial to some of those indolent would-be intellectuals. Only by taking away their rights and turning them into mindless robots for two years can they appreciate what democracy does for them.

Only by being ready to fight and kill can we know peace.

We all know our students need more training in the moral values of our God-fearing, free enterprise, western democratic society, but why don't we also teach them about the challenges of the future?

Why aren't we offering courses in Communist control or Red eradication? Why are we even twisting their young minds by misguidedly offering "the other side" in the mistaken name of fairness?

The name Students' Union must go and be replaced with Students, Inc. so we remove the terminology of that first step to Marxism and replace it with something ideologically palatable.

Finally, to strengthen them for the struggles ahead, we should triple tuition, halve the number of spots available and require an average of 8.0 to stay in school. That way, we will have the best and the brightest to lead us into the challenges of the future.

And the rest? Well, if they can't positively contribute to the level required by the society of the future, the next most noble thing they can do is remove themselves and not be a drain on it.

It was good enough for the Eskimos and they never faced a communist threat.

Occasionally I am saddened and ashamed when I see the way the media treats one of the poor downtrodden members of our society.

Recently a man who had bravely pointed out injustices that were occurring at the Edmonton Food Bank was unjustly villified in the Edmonton press as being an ignorant clod. His integrity was questioned along with his motives — all needlessly as I have since found out.

Yes, one of the Clean Commandos has come forward with the information that Walter Szwender, MLA, was not merely spouting drivel, but was speaking from personal experience when he said that most people benefiting from the food bank were not the deserving poor. The Clean Commando, always on the alert, saw Walter himself receiving food at the bank.

Thus what appeared to be yet another politician shooting himself in the foot was in fact a man too proud to admit his noble failings. Walter had observed firsthand the failure of a system, the manipulation of the food bank by the undeserving poor so as to make the government look cruel and heartless.

When the media questioned poor Walt's motives, he was too damn proud to admit to his personal experience. Walt had been struggling along on his meager salary as an MLA for quite some time. His wife had begged him to get a real job, but Walter knew that his constituents needed him more than his family needed bread on the table.

Finally driven by the direst of straits, Walter had gone to the food bank. There he had witnessed such wanton waste by the undeserving poor that he had to speak out.

We owe a debt to the Walters of the world, a debt that we never can truly pay, perhaps only cover the interest payments. On behalf of those few poor people who are truly deserving, drop off a food parcel today at the Belmont constituency office.

Janitor Cleans Up Mall

Well, here I am on page 5. Of course, I made a name for myself on page 8 of this hallowed rag, and I took all you bastards for a ride then, didn't I? Had all of you running around at coffee break asking each other, "Boy oboy, did you read page 8 yet? Listen to today's joke."

Yes, those were the days. But my favorite little item was the "Best Set of Legs in Edmonton" contest; pant, pant, slobber, slobber. Thanks ladies for sending all those yummy photos. They really got my saliva going in the mornings. Of course, as more and more leg was shown with kinkier and kinkier attire to boot, damned if I didn't have a little accident one morning after selecting the day's entry. Oh well, all in the name of making exploitation respectable. Sex sells, ya know.

They told me I can't have legs contests on page 5, but I'm just happy to be in the same wad of sheets as the Scumshine Girl, Hee, Hee!

Readers must wonder what I do each day, apart from taking a few hours to put together this crap they call a "column". Well, believe me, all this loafing can really make a guy fat. Obese. Of course, after a while, as the ego builds up and the crud really starts to roll out of the old Smith-Corona, I begin to take myself seriously. I tried to make damned sure everyone else I ran into did too. Problem is, the only one who would listen was a bottle of Johnny Walker.

So, Bingo, another "Journalist" (that's what it says on the job description) hits the skids.

To make a long story incomplete, I'm off the booze now and high on life again. Just add my name to the list under Liza Minelli, Richard Dreyfuss and Richard Pryor.

the crooks and beautiful citizens of this here frozen community perched on the banks of the stinking North Saskatchewan.

Speaking of beautiful people, this afternoon I had coffee with J. Jonah Janitor, the man who faithfully keeps clean very our own Scum offices. Jonah told me through snuff-embazoned teeth of a recent experience he had at West Edmonton Mall. It seems Jonah and his wife Beth were enjoying their mama burgers in Gourmet World when two trendy mall patrons got into a fistcuff in front of their table. One of the scrappers was smoking a long stinky cigarette as he enjoyed his coffee. This apparently offended the trendoid sitting behind him, who promptly dumped his Minute Maid all over stinky's gelled hairs.

As push came to shove and jest to insult, Jonah felt it his duty to quell the disturbance before it got ugly. "I jest cuffed one o' those girly types up alongside the hed, and booted the other with my Kodiak size 9." Mall 5-0 quickly removed the two delinquents from the scene.

Thanks to the down-to-earth heroics of Jonah Janitor, our beautiful and tranquil mega-mall was spared an ugly disruption.

Praise to Jonah and may his pickup truck run long and smooth.

Dressup charged with Casey's death

PUPPET MASTICATED

by VERY POIGNANT
Scum Staff Writer

TV personality Ernie Coombs, who was known to children as Mr. Dressup on the long-running CBC show, was arrested yesterday on charges of child abuse and manslaughter.

Coombs gave himself up after a six-month investigation into the death of "Casey". The hand puppet was found dead of exposure in a treehouse in Coombs' backyard.

Investigators said Casey had been dead at least a week when his half-frozen, dog-eared corpse was found by neighbours.

"It was gross," said Captain Kangaroo, who lives down the street. "It was half-eaten by that stupid mutt, Finegan."

The half-starved, half-crazed dog puppet was put down by the SPCA. "They didn't call it Finegan's wake for nothing," said an SPCA official who wished not to be identified.

The relationship between Casey and Mr. Dressup was never explained, although it had been rumoured that Coombs abducted the puppet at a shopping mall in Don Mills, Ontario. Coombs' long-time friend and 'confidante', Mr. Rogers, said in an interview Monday that he believes Coombs is innocent.

"I just can't believe this," said Rogers. "He loved little boys."

When reached at his suburban castle for comment, the Friendly Giant cranked up his drawbridge and told reporters to "Fuck off".

A resident of Coombs' neighbourhood, Aunt Bird, last week announced she will set up a fund in Casey's name.

Bird, a prominent West Edmonton Mall socialite, said the fund will benefit abused puppets everywhere. Donations can be made in cash only c/o The Editor, Edmonton Scum.

ATROCITY CONTINUES

Gumbo's massacred its one hundred thousandth hamburger yesterday and outgoing SU president Mike Nickel is promising a hunger strike to protest. "They could have listened to me and put an A and W in but noooo..." sputtered the angry little fellow. "I see this as my last chance to serve the students and I'm going to do it even if it kills me."

Incoming SU president Dave Oginski has promised a referendum on the issue in six months ("if it hasn't died yet") and said if it would make everyone happy, he might lobby the university to get a McDonald's put in Quad, but that he wasn't promising anything.

NEW DIPLOMATIC SPORT

Servant slapping has become all the rage in embassies around the world after Sondra Gottlieb, wife of Canadian Ambassador to the United States Allan Gottlieb, initiated the sport at a party several weeks ago.

PRE-DIGESTED NEWS

Gottlieb pioneered the effect with simple openhanded forehead slap to the face, which was judged on the basis of impact, noise, welt and hysterical media reaction.

The sport has been expanded into several different categories, besides the openhanded forehead: the backhand, the double fore and/or backhand, speed-slapping and freestyle.

"They'll all get bored with it oh so very soon", said one well-known Washington socialite, and predicted punches, kicks and tag-team events to keep the diplomatic juices flowing at the expense of their hapless servants.

Ronald Reagan had plans to send swarms of B-52's over Libya dropping water-filled balloons.

"President Reagan figured a lot of the problems he's having with 'Mo' (Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy) were just simple misunderstandings and that a corny practical joke might loosen things up," explained White House spokesman Larry Speakes.

For additional guffaws, Reagan was going to send Khadafy a package with a pistol that would shoot a cloth that read "Bang! Just kidding Mo" and 'whoopie rugs' for use at prayer times.

However, Speakes said that was before the President's decision Monday to "nuke them into the sand."

ROLE REVERSAL

The Engineering Students Society will be hiring famous female impersonator Divine to strip at their '87 skit nite.

"Well, we're getting tired of being called sexist pigs, so we figured if we had a guy who just dressed like a girl stripping then nobody would get mad at us or anything," said ESS President Ritz Crackers.

"I figured out the aggravation factor on my HP 41C calculator," cried the excited engineer, as he caressed the sleek device's custom chrome racing stripes. "It should work perfectly!"

"I have no problem with it," said the 300 lb. Divine in a telephone interview, "they're paying me well, and besides, I get a lot of fan mail from engineers telling me they have my poster over their beds so it should be a thrill for me!"

When asked for comment, other faculties just laughed and laughed.

UPSET WITH BOOK PRICES? TELL US ABOUT IT

The Students' Union is preparing a submission to the University Board of Governors regarding the high cost of books and supplies. In order to make a strong and realistic presentation on your behalf, we need your response to the following questions. Please fill out as completely as possible:

Faculty _____ Year _____

Other: (explain)

How much did you spend on books and required supplies in the: First Term? _____

Second Term? _____

Were more texts required than were necessary or useful in any one of your classes?

Yes ☐

No ☐

Do you feel this amount is: reasonable? ☐ unreasonable? ☐

If yes, explain. (Use another sheet if necessary).

Were you able to find used texts? yes ☐
no ☐

If not, was this because:

Only new texts were assigned ☐
Texts were assigned too late to find any ☐
Too much trouble to look for them ☐
Looked, but couldn't find any ☐

Please tell us of any experiences or opinions that would contribute to this issue. Suggest ways you think the University Bookstore could reduce the cost of books.

Please deposit this form and any other additional comments into the "Entertainment Survey" boxes provided at the Gateway stops, OR return this form to:

These may be dropped off or mailed for free via campus mail at any department office.

No radios for drunk jock

(U of A) — The word has come down from the top!

No more radios in the weightroom on the University of Alberta campus.

There were too many complaints from the older, but more powerful patrons of the facility, and this month the rules were changed.

The occasional young athlete still brings a radio or cassette player, but this is coon taken care of by a few regulars with more muscles than brains.

Says one muscle-bound man: "We don't like...um..." and another: "What?"

Meanwhile it looks like those who like tunes in the weightroom will have to wait until the brawny bunch graduates.

Next decade, maybe?

Tory Building to topple

Seismologist Murray Flintstone of the Department of Geology, UofA, predicts that on Friday, April 18, when everyone is writing finals, the Tory Building will fall down. The prediction comes after months of studies of earthquakes in Alberta and of the structural defects of Tory.

"Face it, everyone in that building's gonna die," said Flintstone. Flintstone was not available for further comment. He is now in intensive care at the U of A Hospital after a mysterious car accident.

Home, sweet, home

Betty Lou-Mae of Oochycocochy, Tennessee moved into her dream home on Monday, right after her marriage to Billy GoodoleBoyd. What's so strange about all this? Their house is made of popsicle sticks!

Betty has collected the sticks ever since childhood and her mother is very proud of her accomplishment. "Betty wa'n't gonna amount to nuthin' 'less she built a house or somethin'."

What does the future hold in store for Betty and Billy? "We're buying fire insurance Thursday, and Friday a'm gonna get a denture fittin'."

Rats all the rage

Although McDonalds has been immensely popular in France for years, a new product, the McRatburger has met with unsurpassed success.

BILL ODDLY ENOUGH

The Parisian representative for McDonald's Inc., Mr. Flow Bear, states that the product was introduced slowly.

"Seeing that the French like frog's legs, we started out two years ago with a McR.L.T., a hamburger with two luscious rat legs, lettuce and tomato. It was so popular, we then went to a totally rat-meat sandwich."

"The trendy existential French youth, who wear black clothing, just eat it up. For those who buy with economy in mind it's also the right product. We breed our rats in Paris' finest sewers."

What next?

Ron cheered up

While everyone else is busy dumping on poor Moammar Khadafy, at least one person is thanking God that Khadafy's so omery.

"He's keeping Ron on his toes," chuckled First Lady Nancy Reagan. Apparently U.S. President Ronald Reagan has been bored silly.

"Ron's been feeling that he's not really needed, and at the same time everyone's been picking on him."

"This war is just the right pick-me-up for Ron to get him busy and force people to see things his way."

Good news for sex

Scientists in Los Angeles have discovered sex can cure the common cold.

Combined with a good diet, moderate exercise, plenty of rest and liquids, as well as some powerful decongestants and cough medicines, sex has shown to significantly lessen the misery of a cold.

"We've proven that sex is not only fun, but also good for you," said Dr. Bob Cessed. "We found that of the ten people who had colds, all lost their colds within a month."

Are there any problems with this new cure?

"Well, unfortunately the cure is only one way," said Cessed, "and does not protect both members of the couple."

Makeovers solve everything

Well, after years and years of telling girls how to pop pimples, I finally got a really important letter. A poor girl wrote in to me about a serious problem of hers that I could really help her with. Is it persistent split ends? Weak, flakey fingernails? Cakey foundation? No, this girl has a serious attitude problem:

Dear Icky,

I've written you for your opinion. I'm a woman of 21 years. My goal is to be independent and happy. I feel as if I have everything in perspective.

But I do have a problem. I feel women are under too much pressure to conform to unrealistic or boring standards of beauty. In addition, looks are the only consideration of worth. I'm not a slob, but I am casual about my looks. I like being complimented on my mind and personality too. But I think a lot of women are insecure because they can't measure up.

I think you should devote some of your column to helping women that have real problems. Perhaps you should encourage the editors of the Scum to start up a column that tries to come up with some solutions to feminine problems (problems that men have too, but are traditionally regarded as feminine) like inadequate daycare, child and wife abuse, rape,...

Well anyways, this poor girl continues to whine about some other problems.

ICKY COVERINGS

Well, there isn't a problem in the world that can't be helped by a...MAKE-OVER!!!

Just to prove it to you all, today we will makeover GIGGLES. Giggles has just tons of problems. She's got hairy cheeks, mousey hair colour, and large pores. We showed her how to make the most of her problems, and in the process gave her a real career goal to work for. After her makeover, Giggles decided to become a Scumshine girl! And she'll probably achieve that goal before her skin rots off from the reaction to the makeup.

LUCKY GIRL!!! And what an example to the twisted bag who wrote in. So bye for today and remember that beauty is happiness.

Another poochpack helped

(before) Giggles is just a mess. No wonder she looks so unhappy. That nose needs a cleaver, those nails an industrial cleaner, and that body some accessories.

(after) Well, we just totally scoured Giggles' face off, dyed her hair into a lovely shade of drab brown, and eradicated her identity. We gave her an individual look completely distinguishable from the everyday-pretty-girl look. Why, Giggles thought she was looking at a different person, when she saw herself in the mirror.

Dreary Abby:

My husband (I'll call him Roy) has a new hobby: yodelling. That's fine, I can live with that, but it's just that he can't fucking quit. He was fined at his job (as a librarian), all our friends have left us, and now he wants me to learn how to yodel too!

Listen, he's at it again. It's four o'clock in the morning. I haven't slept in three days. I can't stand it anymore. Arghhhh!

Rip, rend, tear, long protracted scream, followed by queer silence and long bout of choking sobs. Please advise me.

"What have I done"
Father, Alberta

Dear "What have I done":

You need an interior decorator for your living room. Blood stains on furniture are a real problem. (P.S. The Edmonton number for Yodellers Anonymous is 432-4236. Ask for Mike.)

Dreary Abby,

I have a problem, I couldn't find a pair of shoes that match my eye color and my girlfriend has threatened to leave me as a result. Please tell me what to do, please..please..please be quick.

-colorless eyes-
Colorado

Dear Colorless Colorado,
Dye your eyes to match your shoes.

Dreary Abby,

Help! My best friend and I are having an argument about ketchup. I think ketchup is gross on mashed potatoes, asparagus, ice cream, and all the other perfectly good food she puts that shit on. It's so embarrassing to go to a restaurant and watch her smear this red stuff all over her chocolate mousse, stir it in her coffee, squirt it on her kids.

What do you think?

Bloody Sick of Ketchup

Dear Bloody,

When you have a real problem, like marital infidelity, call me.

Abby

Dreary Abby:

My husband just left me for a chimpanzee, my best friend was sentenced to 15-to-life for shoplifting, my son has started to peel the paint off our walls and eat it, and my daughter reads your column. What can I do to stop her?

The star of Post Corporation's Sugar Crisp commercials was arrested yesterday in Miami on charges of narcotics trafficking.

Rupert Sugar Bear, of no fixed address, was arrested at a beachfront phone booth. Witnesses say that after placing his call, Sugar Bear attempted to flee to his car parked nearby.

Two plainclothes officers then screamed, "Miami Vice, freeze." Sugar Bear failed to respond and was forcibly subdued. An eyewitness remarked, "Them two cops man, were they cool. I never seen two guys dressed that well. The white guy, he just stood around smoking and adjusting his shades afterwards. The dark guy read the bear his rights in some Jamaican sounding voice and then said, 'I'm so great I can't stand it'."

Sugar Bear became famous in the early 70's as the gentle unassuming hero of the Sugar Crisp commercials. Audiences were enthralled by Sugar Bear's ability to solve all manner of domestic crises by dispensing Sugar Crisp to the opposing sides. Sugar Bear's career was on the upswing in recent months.

Sugar Bear, speaking from his padded cell in the Dade County jail, remarked, "This is f-king bulls-t, I've been framed. I told the officer, the one called Sinny, I said you can't do this to me. I'm a star. Hey, you're trying to incriminate me under false pretenses. Then he jumps in my face and sez 'Look, jack, you're looking at 5 years minimum. You better start talking. Who'd you phone?' The food here sucks," added Sugar Bear. "If they serve Cheerios again, this bear is going on a hunger strike."

Arresting officer, Sinny Crock'o Shit, reached aboard his yacht, commented, "Look pal, do I look like I fell off the turnip truck? The bear was dealing. He uses, too. You ever see anybody so mellow?" Crock'o Shit's partner, Retardo

Snubs, added, "Yeah, mon, da bear berry, berry big in de Florida operation." Snubs accent changed as he restrained Crock'o Shit, saying, "be cool, man, be cool."

The Scum has learned that Sugar Bear placed his phone call to someone named 'Granny'. After listening to 'Granny' for a short time, Sugar Bear murmured, "Oh no, Granny. We got trouble. Is it the Columbians? Hey, hey, I'll be right over." Police in Miami had taped the call, after which they arrested Sugar Bear.

Sugar Bear maintains his innocence, claiming he was only doing his job. "And, hey," Sugar Bear snapped, "that cop Sinny sayin' I used. Jeez, you eat Sugar Crisp and you'll get mellow too. You know how much sugar is in the stuff? That's why people quit scrappin' when I give 'em Sugar Crisp."

Officer Crock'o Shit said he is shocked by the whole affair. "I used to look up to the guy (Sugar Bear). But now..." Crock'o Shit, in a soft voice, added, "I thought we only got sold out when I was over there. But here, now, I'm back in the world and I see this kinda stuff."

A spokesman for Post Corporation said Post supports Sugar Bear. "The Sugar Bear is crucial to our marketing of Sugar Crisp. He is an individual who is very devoted to his job. All the evidence against him is circumstantial. A group of hungry Columbians dropped by Granny's for lunch and she was low on food. They threatened to abduct her unless they were fed. Sugar Bear was preparing to deliver 3 kilograms of Sugar Crisp to Granny. That's what really happened."

Sugar Bear has been denied bail pending further investigation.

Marg Daly preggio.

C.B.C. Television has finally disclosed why the decision was made to cancel the popular Don Messer's Jubilee in the spring of 1969.

Producers of the show discovered that singer Marg Daly was carrying Charlie Chamberlain's child. In fact, the couple had had twelve illegitimate children over the course of the program.

"We thought that she was just chubby, in fact in the press kits she was described as 'good natured but chubby and plain.'" explained the fatherly Messer. "The producers were livid. I mean what kind of image is that for young children to see... Absolutely everyone watched the show, God it was disgusting?"

Bonzo for mayor

Bonzo the chimp, President Ronnie Reagan's long-time companion and former co-star, has decided to throw his hat into the political ring. Said the furry beast, "Hell if Clint (Eastwood) and Ronnie can do it, so can I."

Like his former co-star, Bonzo plans to make his first stand in California. "I believe that because Ronnie was the former Governor of that state, he will prove to be a big drawing card in my bid to win the San Diego Zoo seat, ...at any rate it should win me votes with the hawks."

Bonzo is as yet unsure of his platform. "I'd thought I'd just follow Ronnie's lead, you know collect advisors about me and become a mouthpiece for their right-wing, narrow minded, hawkish, oops, ... no comment."

And the key to winning says Bonzo, "Is a wife with political savvy. Someone who is attractive, but not too, you know just like Nancy Reagan. People just hate political wives who are too attractive.... look at Rita Jenrette. We all know that PLAYBOY would never ask someone like Nancy to do a centerfold shot...and that's the kind of thing a politician has to consider when choosing a mate, I mean wife."

Does Bonzo have any wife-candidates in mind. "Well I'd consider it a real coup if I could get Anita Bryant. She stands for all the the right things: motherhood, heterosexuality and Saturday night at the movies. How about it Anita, you and me right at the top."

And is Bonzo looking beyond winning the mayor's seat in San Diego. "Well, I could see myself in the President's office, yes very easily. ... that is of course after Ronnie kicks it. I've already got a running mate in mind... Clint Eastwood's co-star Clyde, the orangatang. Together we could sweep the country."

Miami Screaming Eagles sue for playoff berth

by James R. Polaris
Scum Staff Writer

Miami Screaming Eagles owner Elmer DeFudd announced today that the team will sue the N.H.L. to be included in the Stanley Cup playoffs next year, regardless of where they finish in the standings.

"Making the playoffs seems to be totally unrelated to where you finish," said DeFudd. "Toronto was in third to last place this year! This situation is completely unfair to the fans and the players. Not only that, we need the playoff money."

The Eagles were eliminated from the playoffs this season when they finished in 6th place in the Adams Division. However, they ended the year with 78 points, more than 25 points ahead of the Winnipeg, Vancouver, and Toronto teams — all of which made the playoffs.

DeFudd added that he hopes to get the Buffalo Buffaloes, Pittsburgh Panthers, and New Jersey Dartsiders to join in the lawsuit. "Hey, they finished ahead of those Canadian teams (Winnipeg, Vancouver, and Toronto) too," he said.

N.H.L. president John Ziegler did not comment on the potential lawsuit. However, a high league official who asked to remain nameless said that the suit was not completely unexpected. "We knew that Hartford had been talking to a lawyer about suing. I guess he must have contacted Miami when the Swordfishers got in."

The Hartford Swordfishers had finished out of the playoffs, but ahead of at least one playoff team for several years running. They made the playoffs in the last week of the season this year.

Buffalo team officials indicated that they were thinking about taking DeFudd's offer to join in the suit. Buffalo GM Montgomery "Scotty" Scott asked, "What's going on here? Is the league discriminating against American teams? Who's in charge of the playoff policy, Pat Riggins?"

Riggins, a goalie for the Boston Bruins, complained last year that American hockey players were taking jobs away from Canadians.

At the league office in Montreal, our source did not deny Scott's suggestion. "He (Riggins) probably does have an effect on the playoff hopes of the Bruins and the teams they play against, particularly teams in their division like Buffalo and Miami."

Partly because of the Swordfisher situation, the NHL playoff system has been criticized heavily in the past. However, this marks the first time that a team has talked about suing. Several independent observers believe that the N.H.L.'s fear of lawsuits will soon result in an out-of-court settlement.

It is as natural a combination as sleeping and philosophy class, student loans and RATT, and empty seats at Bear games. In a move that exemplifies the Athletics Department's long running friendship with The Scum, the Butterdome has been renamed in honour of Scum Alumni Rasmussen and Delaney. The duo is best known for their comic strip Bub Slug, which runs in the Edmonton Urinal. The new name for the indoor track facility will be BUB, unifying the U of A's policy of three letter building names. Previously named buildings that fall into this category are HUB, CAB, and SUB. A leak from within the Athletics Department confirms the initials to stand for Big Ugly Building.

Oil's Well That Ends Well

In a continuing effort to invest the wealth squeezed from the hearts of the suppressed peasants, Ferdinand Marcos has purchased the Edmonton Oilers from Peter Pocklington for $82.6 million.

The deposed Filipino leader spoke to the Scum from his capitalistic beachside resort in Hawaii. "I had to spend it all before that Cory bitch steals it from me," said Marcos.

The deal was ratified by a "free vote" of the Board of Directors.

Marcos said that his wife helped him in his decision. "Imelda thought that hockey players had nice shoes.

"She is very happy. She is already working on new uniforms for the team. Imelda thinks Jari is cute."

Marcos plans a few changes. "I want to bring to the team some of the philosophies that made me such a success."

Planned changes include wage rollbacks to sub-poverty level, martial law "to correct the team's disciplinary problems", and use of subversion and guerilla tactics on opposing teams. "Baby Doc (Duvalier) is going to be my new PR director — this free press thing fascinates him."

Said Marcos, tyrant and entrepreneur, "This is great, it is almost like having my own country again."

University Coverage

At the CIAU finals yesterday, the Golden Bears' basketball team upset everybody in claiming their first title. Mike Kornak had 30 points in leading Alberta to a 95-82 upset win over York. In other university news...

Sports Dolts Honky Hoop

In a strange move to put fans in the stands, the perennial doormats of the Pacific Division of the NBA, the Golden State Warriors, have released all their black players and have replaced them with marginal white players.

"We figured that Oakland (home of the Warriors) being mostly black, it would create some curiosity in the team," said team spokesman Moe Green. The last all-white team in the NBA was the 1954 St. Louis Hawks.

Unfortunately for the Warriors, their plan seems to have backfired as the team is once again last in league attendance. The main reason for this is because the team is also last in every statistical category in the league. "Man, I ain't payin' to see a bunch of white boys lose!" said an unidentified fan.

The biggest statistical drop is in rebounding. The team, hampered by "white man's disease" (read: they can't jump), has collected only 11 boards all year. Moe Green has since been relieved of his duties.

Nome Raid!

In an unprecedented move, Al Davis, Managing General Partner of the Los Angeles Raiders, has once again pulled up stakes and moved his team. The Raiders, late of Oakland and now Los Angeles, will now be known as the Nome Raiders.

Davis has stated that his decision to move the team was based on the construction of the 150,000 seat Nome-Dome stadium. "Just think of all the money I'm gonna rake in from those stupid dog-mushers," chortled Davis as he boarded Alaska Airlines to visit his new headquarters.

Davis had earlier turned down a last ditch effort by a Los Angeles delegation led by Mayor Tom Bradley to keep the team in L.A. with a polite (for Davis), yet firm, "Screw You."

Whether or not the team will survive in an area where the nearest settlement of 150,000 people is in the Soviet Union is yet to be seen.

Tuele's Mum

In a press conference on Tuesday, Bill Tuele, public relations man for the Stanley Cup Champion Edmonton Oilers, announced that he "had nothing to say" and that "there is nothing new to report on the team."

Site of the Nome Dome

This has sparked off one of the biggest crises in sports reporting history. "I've got page one to fill," wailed one editor. "What am I going to write about?" One paper has even called in professional analysts to try and decipher what Tuele's statement really meant.

As a result of all this, the front page of most sports sections in the country will remain blank as a symbol of protest. "We're not gonna let them (the Oilers) push us around," said one unidentified sportswriter. "Either they start producing some meaningful facts and trivia or we're only gonna write two stories a day about them instead of our regular five."

In response, the Oilers have called a press conference for next Wednesday.

The U of A psychology department has invented a new machine which can photograph actual pictures from within the dreaming brain. The first person to test this new invention was Athletics Director, Dr. Bob Threadbare (picture of dream on right). The machine only works when the guinea... uh, subject is in the period of deep sleep which lasts for only three hours a night. Threadbare was rumoured to be smiling and rubbing his thumb and forefinger together while envisioning this picture.

FEMMES STAY HOME

Club faces suit suit

By DUG N. TATTERED

A group of tough-talking broads have refused to take the Active 36-26-36 Club to court on grounds the all-male organization discriminates against women.

"Are you kidding? Join this bunch of losers?" quipped Awomanda Arugula of the Status of Women Alberta Team (SWAT). "All they do is sit around, get drunk and leer at women."

Club leader Clement Pigbouy denies Arugula's accusations and defends the club's reputation of promoting civic joie de vivre.

"Why last month alone our Drink-Til-You-Puke-a-thon raised over $30 for Cirrhosis of the Liver research," he said.

Pigbouy also denied that his club members were too stupid to do anything but sit around and drink.

"Some of the boys work real hard," he said. "They don't have time to gallivant around doing that namby-pamby bleeding heart liberal social charity stuff."

"On a good day," said Pigbouy, "most of our members have a hard time trying to find the Commercial Hotel, where we have our meetings."

In reference to charges the club may be violating the Charter of Rights by excluding women from membership, Pigbouy said, "Some of my best friends are dames."

But while the feminists are not taking the 36-26-36 Club to court, the Commercial Hotel is.

"All those polyester suits with air-strip lapels are just hell on business," commented Gub Molden-Bolson, the Commercial Hotel chief custodian.

The case goes to court next week.
